It is possible that you need to do it in a new window in your browser, but you can keep trying. Lionsgate released the first trailer for A Simple Favor today, and the cast looks killer. Anna Kendrick, Blake Lively, Anna Faris and even Christina Applegate are absolutely smoking in this first look at the film. The story follows a supermarket worker who uses his wits and on-the-fly invention to help his best friend, who is also a single mom. The source material is itself semi-autobiographical. Simple Favor is actually inspired by real-life events surrounding Jonah Hill, who not only wrote the book and directed the film, but also stars in it as well. The original novel was a New York Times best seller, and while you can watch the book trailer above, you can also go behind the scenes in the trailer as well. And, we have our first look at the cast, and the trailer looks awesome. Check it out. A Simple Favor is in theaters August 2. Source: Universal PicturesWednesday, February 9, 2014 Following the shooting at the Emanuel AME Church in Charleston, S.C., I checked on the "intent to kill" provision of the Armed Career Criminal Act (ACCA). As we all know, this law kicks in if you've been convicted of three or more "serious drug offenses" in the past. While it is true that the law allows prosecutors to charge burglary in this way, the question is: Does the law allow conviction on a mere "intent to kill?" Defining "Serious Drug Offense" The first question is: What does it mean to be convicted of a "serious drug offense"? The ACCA specifically requires that a defendant be convicted of a felony drug offense that has an "inherently dangerous" element—that is, one that is dangerous as long as used (

The play was performed in the Belk Library Theatre on April 19, 2017. Like any other, in this play, the actor is both the central character and the audience. He becomes each, but also is the audience. He is both the spectator and the audience. It is both the narrator and the audience. We are his audience as we watch him. The audience watches him as he watches us. Like the nose in the country song, the audience is supposed to have a nose. But, unlike the nose in the country song, his nose is not getting in the way. In fact, his nose is not there. He has air in front of his nose. Much like when you are falling asleep, only your ears and the back of your head feel the
